- (i) the financial statements for a business referred to in Instruction C1 for the business's most recently completed financial year that ended before the acquisition date have not been audited; and

Risk of loss – You are buying “securities” (e.g., share, units, notes or debentures) of a small business. A high percentage of small businesses do not survive. You should consider how much of your total assets, your annual income and your other investments is represented by this investment. Consider whether you need this money for your retirement or other purposes. Do you understand that this is a risky investment and that you could lose a significant portion or even all of the money you invest?
Tax Credit - Any tax credit you may receive may be less than the decrease in value of your investment. Any tax credit is a tax credit against provincial tax otherwise payable and if you do not have sufficient tax to offset the credit, your tax credit may not be useable. There is a risk that the issuer will cease to be eligible for a tax credit. Do you understand that the tax credit may not make up for any losses, the tax credit may not be useable if you do not have sufficient tax to pay and that the issuer may lose its eligibility for the tax credit?
Investment returns - If the securities you are buying are supposed to provide a dividend or other return, you should consider whether the business has a reasonable prospect of making the income necessary to make those payments. Do you understand the risk that you may not receive any income such as dividends on this investment?
Resale - The securities you are buying cannot be legally resold except in very limited circumstances. Even if you are legally able to sell them there is no established market in which to resell them. Do you understand that even if the value of your investment increases, you may be unable to sell your securities?
Liquidity - You should consider your “exit strategy” before investing. What is the issuer’s plan to allow you to realize any value in your investment (for example, through an initial public offering or an acquisition of the issuer)? You should consider the issuer’s timeline for achieving that goal compared to your needs. Do you understand that even if the issuer is eventually successful, it may be many years before you are able to realize on your investment?
Redemption risk - Unless specified by the terms of the security, the issuer selling these securities to you is not typically obligated to buy them back from you. Even if you have a right of redemption it will be subject to various conditions and limits. Do you understand that even if you have a right of redemption, it may not be possible to redeem your investment?

EXPIRED 23 NOV 2020

Acknowledgements	Yes	No
Indirect investment – If you invest in a business that intends to invest in another business, you will not typically have a direct investment in the underlying business and will not typically have rights to vote as a shareholder of the underlying business or to participate directly in the distribution of the earnings or assets of that underlying business. Do you understand that with an indirect investment, you are not a shareholder of any underlying business?
Less Information Provided- The issuer is selling these securities under an exemption from the prospectus requirement. The offering memorandum you should have received likely does not contain the same disclosure that would be required to be provided to you by a prospectus. After conducting this offering, the issuer will not be a reporting issuer (public company) and will not be required to provide the ongoing disclosure expected of a reporting issuer. Alberta securities laws require only that you be provided annual financial statements and information regarding how the issuer used the proceeds. Do you understand that you will not receive the initial or ongoing disclosure that you could expect if the issuer was filing a prospectus and becoming a reporting issuer (public company)?
Financial Statements – The issuer selling you these securities may have relied upon a regulatory framework which allows it to prepare its financial statements in accordance with private company generally accepted accounting principles and to have its financial statements reviewed, rather than audited, by a public accountant. Financial statements prepared in this manner lack the assurance that they are reasonably free of a material misstatement and contain less detail than those of a typical reporting issuer (public company). Do you understand that the financial statements of the issuer may have been prepared with accounting principles that do not provide you with all the details and assurance of financial statements of a typical reporting issuer (public company)?
No approval – No government or securities regulatory authority has reviewed, evaluated or endorsed the offering memorandum or the merits of these securities or the truthfulness or adequacy of the disclosure in the offering memorandum. Do you understand that even if this investment is eligible for a tax credit, the merits of this investment have not been reviewed or approved by the Alberta Securities Commission or any government body?
Registered dealer – To determine whether a salesperson is registered prior to making an investment, you can consult the website, www.checkfirst.ca. If the salesperson is not registered, no government or securities regulatory authority has assessed the qualifications, integrity or financial circumstances of the salesperson or the existence of any controls regarding the handling of your assets and you will not have the protections associated with purchasing securities from a registered dealer. Do you understand the risks associated with purchasing securities from a salesperson who is not registered?
